HISTORY of THE FARMHOUSE in SPRING HILL, TN

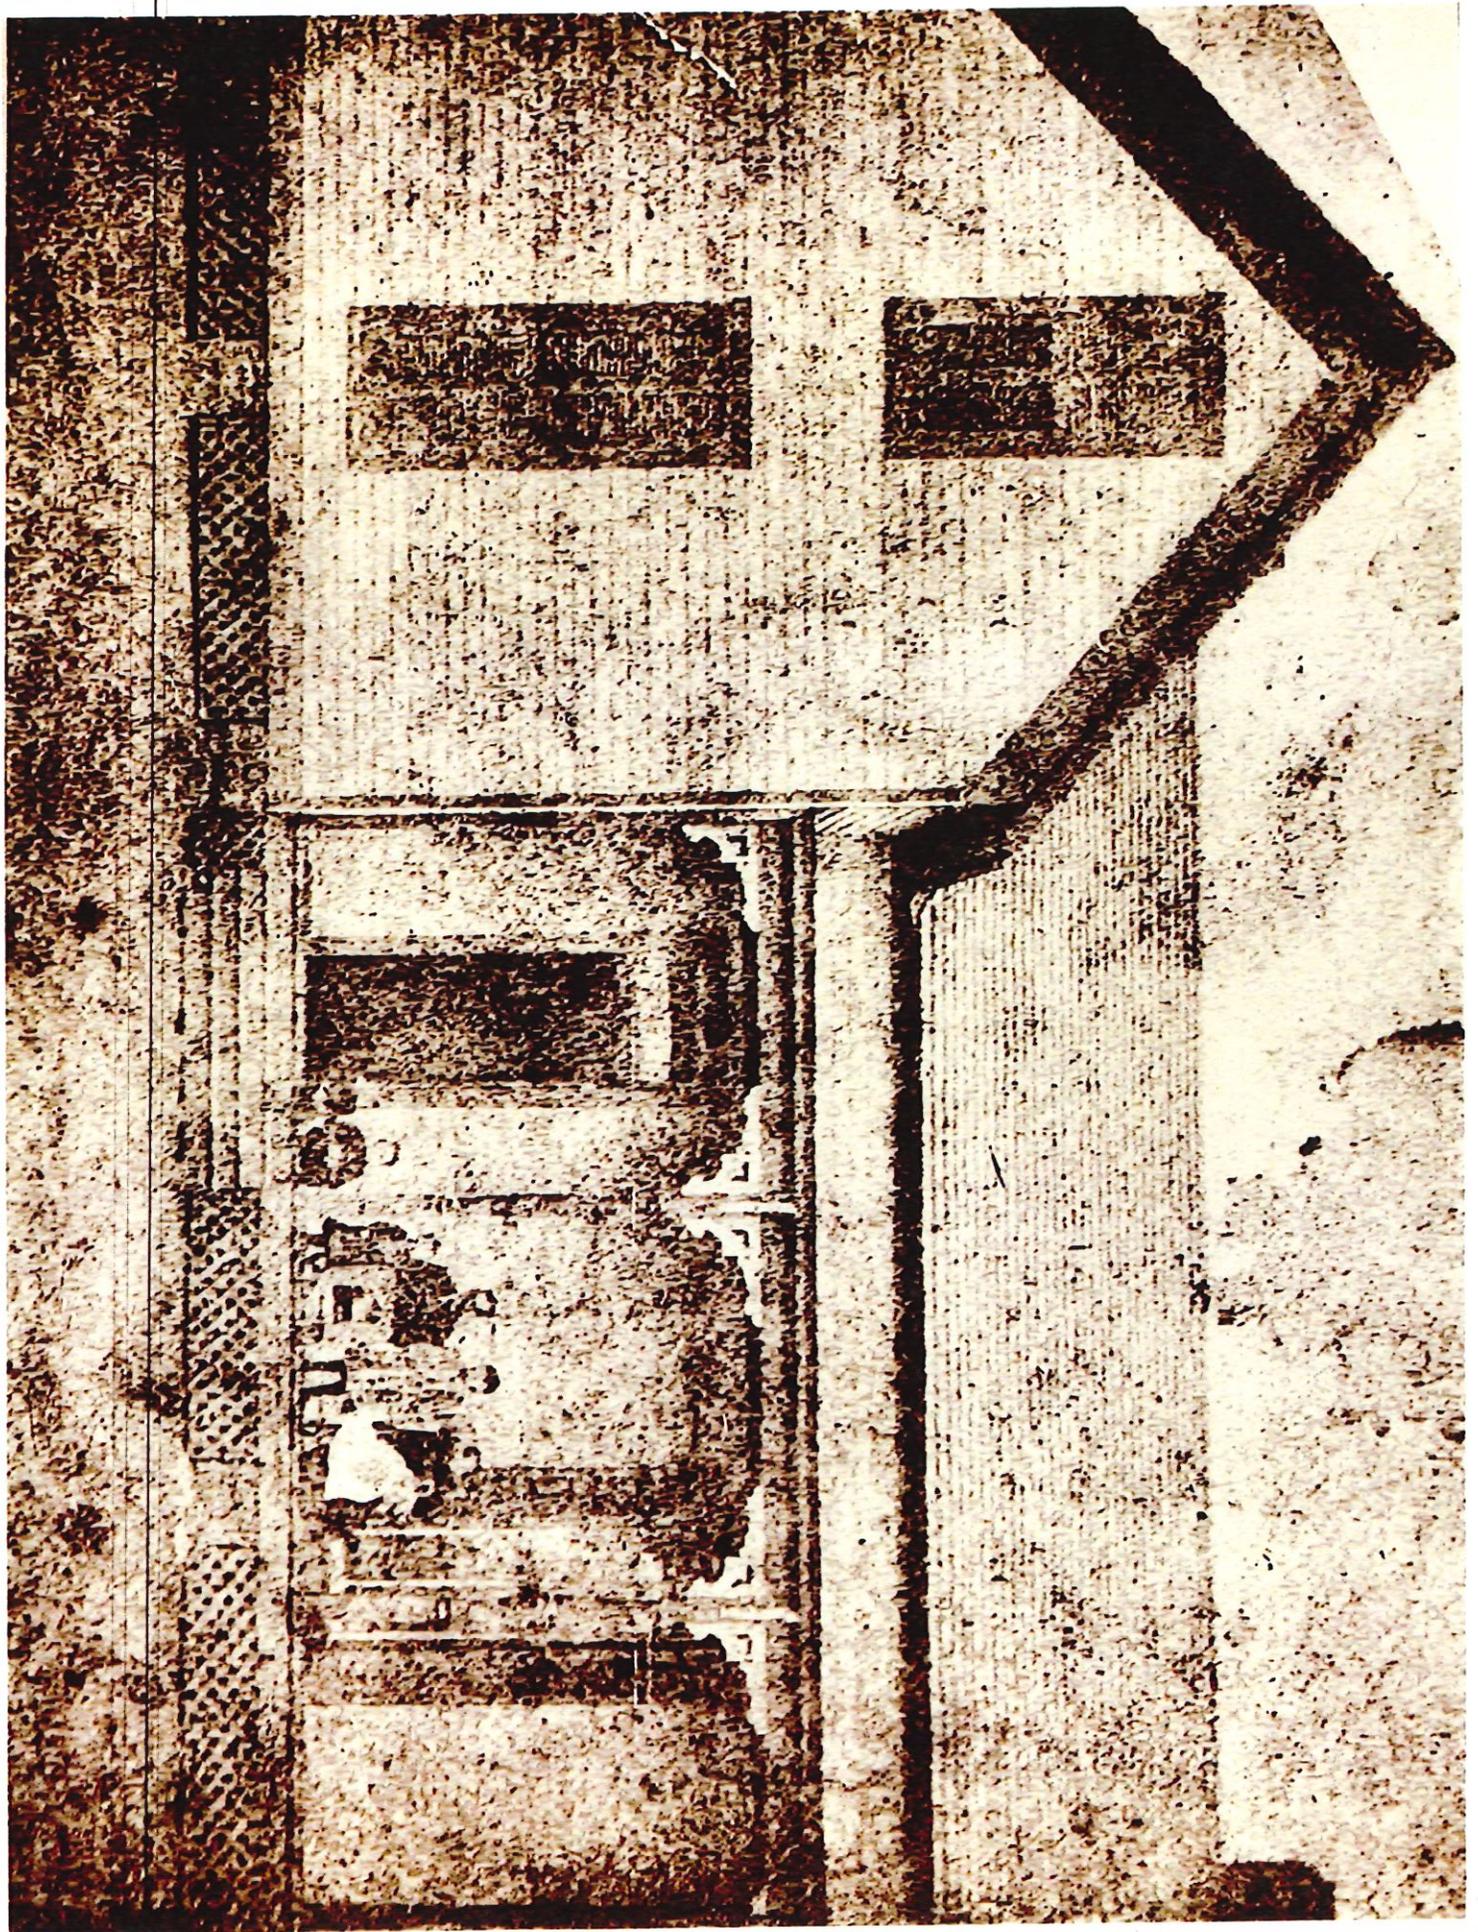

The historic farmhouse at 3035 Reserve Blvd, Spring Hill, TN was built in the mid-1800's and has survived almost 200 years. The farmhouse sits on 5 scenic and pastoral acres in the fast growing city of Spring Hill, TN at the corner of The Saturn Parkway, Kedron Road and Reserve Blvd. The property is owned by The Family Trust of Barbara Jenkins. Four families have owned the property since the land grants—The Odil's, Boatwright's, Terrill's, and Jenkins'. The attached photo shows the Odil family in 1892. (L to R: James Polk Odil, Will Fountain, Guy Blackburn Odil, Andrew Polk Odil, Susan Elizabeth Odil, Mary Elizabeth, the mother (also called Mollie) and baby Mary.

The Jenkins' purchased the property in 1982 from The Terrill's, some ninety years after the Odil family picture was taken. The Jenkins' took two years to restore the farmhouse and were careful to leave many original features in tact, such as fireplaces, fireplace mantels, wainscoting, tongue and groove ceilings, etc. Most of the metal roof is original from the 1800's. The front porch posts, Victorian lattice work, and elegant carved front door are all original from when the house was built. There are walnut floors downstairs and yellow pine floors upstairs. The fireplaces are made with handmade brick and mud mortar from the 1800's. For safety reasons, today they are decorative only. The long narrow windows common to old farmhouses back then have been replaced with custom energy efficient windows to fit the openings. In the Library area, the walls and book shelves are solid cherry grown and milled in Maury County. Civil War relics are on display in a shadow box. They were found in the fields around the farmhouse and where Civil War Troops marched across the land to the famous Battle of Franklin.

The vaulted area in the farmhouse is like a sweeping cathedral and was added in 1982. The post and beam addition was designed after old European structures that have stood for thousands of years. The red oak beams from New Hampshire are held together by pegs—not nails. The stunning stained-glass window came from an 1848 quilt pattern in Massachusetts with a basket of flowers across the top. Along the border of the window are state flowers from states the Jenkins walked across in their 1970's bestseller 'The Walk West'. Sydney McClain from Columbia, Tn was the glass artist who made the masterpiece. The State Flower of Tennessee is also included.

The winding staircase is a masterpiece. John Frano, a New England craftsman, built the hand-pressed, steamed, and hand-pegged winding staircase from oak and mahogany. After building staircases for the Rockefeller's, the farmhouse staircase was his last work. Adjacent to the staircase is a stacked stone wall with 'one-big-rock' for a mantel from a Maury County creek.

The museum murals in the (far right) front room were a gift from William Morrow Publishers, N.Y. The murals are a picture of farm work in the 1800's where farmers used pitchforks for hay and mules to pull the wagons. Tennessee mules are famous and continue to be used for trail rides in the Grand Canyon.
